

27/01/2016

GOT A STORY? PHONE OUR NEWS DESK: (041) 504 7324

WICKET TIME: Marquin Aries, 15, whacks the ball, watched by wicketkeeper Bevin Quinate, 14. As northern areas schools remain closed, youngsters are taking advantage of their free time to improve their cricketing skills

Picture: FREDLIN ADRIAAN

given
y of iture

ered the Depart-
"furniture task
schools and to e by April next to audit all the
to ensure the s arrive before

Martin's case unlikely to see large area from Atlanta to Khayelitsha. It includes much of the gang-ridden areas on the Cape Flats. Western Cape forensic pathology services head Vonita Thompson said: "The stats for Tygerberg Mortuary, River Mortuary, show the same pattern as that of Salt River Mortuary."

The number of people killed by gunshot who passed through her morgue pathologist Lorna Martin said. Salt River Mortuary head of forensic pathology Professor Lorna Martin said. "The number of people killed by gunshot - most notably by gunshot - are bringing in more and more bodies year on year, and the morgue cannot cope."

"Even with natural population growth and influx from other provinces, these rising figures for murder are outstripping them." "So this is not an explanation for what is going on," she said.

Suspect thought to be hiding in Bay

A MAN suspected of planning an armed robbery in Kenton-on-Sea is believed to be hiding in Fort Elizabeth. Police spokesman Lieutenant Luvuyo Mekiya said two men - Vuyani Msezani, 35, and Bongani Mdingano, 27 - were arrested in Kenton-on-Sea last week. The arrests followed a tip-off. "The detectives spotted the car at a supermarket and arrested [Msezani] supermarket and arrested [Msezani]